API's Voice Over Internet Protocol (VoIP) Phones receive The Committee on National Security Systems (CNSS) Approval.

COLUMBIA, MD (JAN. 7, 2011) – ADVANCED PROGRAMS, INC. (API)

Advanced Programs, Inc. today announced the NTSWG approval for the DNT502-02 and DNT502-10 VoIP Telephones. These approvals are in accordance with the CNSS Instruction Type-Acceptance Program for Voice Over Internet Protocol Telephones.

The API VoIP telephones are TSG approved for use in Government sensitive areas where national security systems are employed and within environments where national security information is stored, processed, or transmitted. These secure phones will help provide the business benefits of converged communications on classified networks through increased productivity, greater flexibility and the reduced operating costs.

Advanced Programs has continued to receive design wins and program awards for these phones from the U.S. Government and NATO Europe due to superior design and security features.

"One way to save money in today's tight government fiscal environment is to save the cost of resources that are supporting the independent networks that many government agencies still have," said Brian Shayuth, Director, Product Management. "These phones provide a converged communication solution to government networks to help increase efficiencies, reduce cost and meet today's challenges".
